A MOTHER'S TERRIBLE MISTAKE .-A shooting, by mistake, most horrible in its consequences, occurred at Richmond about 2 o'clock Saturday morning. On the outskirts of the city, near the Male Orphan Asylum, lives Mrs. Elizabeth Hicks, a widow lady, with her sixteen-years-old daughter Carrie. Her only other child, a boy of ten, is an inmate of the orphan asylum. A few nights ago thieves stole some of Mrs. Hicks' chickens. When she was aroused Saturday morning by a noise in her back yard she very naturally concluded that the rogues were about again.

Armed with a 38-caliber revolver she went into a room adjoining her bed chamber, and taking a position by a window where she could watch the yard, awaited developments. It was not long before she heard a light footstep behind her and saw a figure in the room. Without a word Mrs. Hicks fired, and instantly there was a scream which continued to ring in the ears of which continued to ring in the ears of the poor woman. "Oh, mamma, you've killed me." The girl staggered back and her mother ran forward just as she was falling and caught her in her arms. The daughter cried out again and again, "Oh Lord have mercy on me," and while attempting to say more ex-pired in her mother's arms. When the pired in her mother's arms. When the distressed parent found that she had killed her child she attempted to take killed her child she attempted to take her own life, but was prevented by a young man boarding with the family. It is supposed that the young lady, who was passionately fond of her mother, followed the latter when she left the room. Not a word was spoken and the mother was not aware of her daughter's presence, and in her excitement mistook her for a thief. EXCURSIONS.
